

“The Civil Rights Struggle, African American GIs, and Germany”

A Digital Archive created by the GHI Washington, HCA Heidelberg and Vassar College

PRESS RELEASE (June 1, 2010):

Maria Höhn Wins DAAD/GSA Prize for the Best Article in the German Studies Review

Maria Höhn, who teaches German history at Vassar College and is the co-director of a joint research initiative and digital archive by the German Historical Institute, Washington DC, Vassar College and the Heidelberg Center for American Studies on "The Civil Rights Struggle, African American GIs, and Germany," is the winner of this year's DAAD/GSA prize for the best article in the German Studies Review for her contribution, "The Black Panther Solidarity Committees and the Voice of the Lumpen" (German Studies Review XXXI, no. 1 (February 2008): 133-154.

The prize is funded by the North American office of the German Academic Exchange Service (DAAD) and carries an award of $500. Recipients are selected every two years by a German Studies Association committee, alternating among the different academic disciplines represented in the association, this year consisting of Anthony Steinhoff (History Department, University of Tennessee), Andrew Bergerson (History Department, University of Missouri), and Angelika von Wahl (Department of Political Science, San Francisco State University).

The director of the DAAD will present the award during the banquet at the GSA Annual Conference on October 8, 2010, in Oakland, California (Oakland Convention Center).

Höhn's most recent publications include "A Breath of Freedom": The Civil Rights Struggle, African American GIs, and Germany (co-authored with Martin Klimke, Palgrave Macmillan, forthcoming October 2010, www.breathoffreedom.org).
