ABOUT THE EDITORS

ANTJE UHLIG completed her diploma in American studies with minors in French and economics at the University of Halle-Wittenberg with a thesis on “U.S.-UN Peacemaking in Somalia 1992–1994, and the Lessons for U.S. Foreign Policy.” She spent extended periods of study and work in Great Britain, France, and Italy, as well as in Canada and the United States. In 2004, she received her master’s degree in international relations from the Paul H. Nitze School of Advanced International Studies at the Johns Hopkins University. Since then, she has been working freelance on various transatlantic projects.

BIRGIT ZISCHKE holds a master’s degree in American literature and politics from New York University (1994) and in international relations/economics from the Paul H. Nitze School of Advanced International Studies at the Johns Hopkins University (1999). She has several years of work experience with the Higher Education Team at the World Bank, where she supervised projects that promote higher education reform and advance scientific and technological research capacity in developing countries. Currently, she is a research associate at the German Historical Institute, responsible for the coordination of grant implementation and the publication of reference guides.